Comment

WE have for a long time held the view that technically, at least, the world of automatic vending is closely allied to the world of coin-operated amusement machines, but in actual fact the two industries have more or less gone their separate ways since vending really got off the ground in this country a few years ago.

Potential customers for vending machines have never seemed to be able to accept the fact that the two types of coin machines are in many ways closely allied, and, for instance, operating and servicing call for many similar requirements. To boil it down, outside opinions say "vending and fruit machines don't mix." One is business, the other is amusement; one is respectable, the other isn't; and so on. Vending associations in the U.S.A. and this country have in the past been very much against their members getting involved in the amusement side of the business, but the two sides are now closer together, particularly in America.

In this issue we publish a feature on vending, from which it will be seen that there are sites where both amusement and vending machines can form an integral part of the facilities; and there are firms who are now operating or supplying machines for both aspects of the business in a big way. The British Automatic Company have of course operated both types for years, and as such, in the scale of both operations, have been unique.

It will certainly be interesting to keep a careful watch on developments in the vending field; compared with the amusement business, it has still been relatively unexploited, and could well provide amusement caterers with a useful diversification in which their knowledge of coin-operated machines could stand them in good stead.

Trends in Automatic Vending

BY BETTY P. BATT

CIGARETTE and confectionery machines and some other types of vending machines were in operation long before the war, but for many people in this country the vending industry as such was not born until hot drink and food venders—mainly American built—made their big British debut at the First International Vending Machine Exhibition held at the Old Horticultural Hall, Westminster, in 1959.

This new development was heralded as the beginning of full-scale automatic vending which already existed in America, then recognised to be 10 years ahead of us in the field. The next step was to get these machines into industry, but this took much longer than expected and a number of smaller firms went bankrupt in the process. It took almost four years to perfect British-made or adapt foreign-built machines to suit the British market, and longer to develop ingredients that could produce a beverage, particularly tea, that was acceptable to the majority.

During the past few years increasing numbers of vending machines have been successfully installed in factories and offices to provide refreshments and snacks for tea breaks. According to a recent estimate the growth rate of machines in industry is now almost 30 per cent. a year. The success of automatic vending in industry has been greatly helped by the shortage of catering staff. There is little doubt that the automatic vending industry would have progressed more rapidly on both industrial and commercial locations if the vending field had attracted more professional operators.

As long as the profits on popular vended products like food, drinks and cigarettes are low, operators in this country can never hold the same position as their American counterparts, who are said to control over 90 per cent. of the vending machine business at a conservative estimate.

Despite the difficulties, however, some vending machine companies in Britain, are beginning to make money by getting away from the American style of operation and establishing individual rental services to suit the needs of their customers. In industry, where operational services are included, the management frequently give subsidies on certain sections of their automatic self-service.

Complete service

One vending concern, Quickmaid Vending Co. Ltd. and Quickmaid Services—formerly trading as Gibeco (England) Ltd., have developed a complete vending service supplying hot drinks and snacks to commerce and industry, but they do not operate machines. Mr. Peter Wiseburgh, the Managing Director of Quickmaid, who has been in the automatic vending industry for three and a half years, is pleased with the results of their machine rental and supply system and has plans to expand into the cold drink and hot snacks vending field.

At the moment most of their business is in industry but the service they offer is also becoming very popular for garage workshops and the forecourts of garages. Garage proprietors have said that the ready availability of hot drinks from a machine has boosted their petrol sales. On a cold night, a motorist will stop to get fuel for his vehicle where he can also sustain himself with a hot beverage. The Quickmaid hot drinks vender offers a wide choice of drinks, incorporates a GB filter-taster that purifies the mains water supply to eliminate chlorine, etc., and can be supplied with a very attractive canopy for outdoor sites as required.

"As far as I am concerned", Mr. Wiseburgh commented, "the automatic vending business is still in its infancy and the possibilities are immense". Asked about clubs and public house sites, he replied: "We haven't approached licensed premises yet, but as soon as we have something we think will interest them we won't hesitate to explore the matter".

Mr. M. Fine, of Phonographic Equipment—who have a 51 per cent.

controlling interest in Quickmaid—was equally confident that automatic vending had a long way to go. "Brewers are certainly vending-minded", he said, "and I am sure they will be interested in anything that is going to help them sell more beer, which is what they are in business for".

He added: "I think coffee machines in public houses and other licensed premises could help trade, particularly on a cold Winter's night. They could also add to the social atmosphere. Frequently a wife accompanying her husband is not really keen on beer and if the husband could buy her a coffee—it must be a good drink—they would probably stay longer and he would drink more beer".

In passing it should be mentioned that a few public houses have introduced milk vending machines and one or two are also experimenting with hot coffee machines.

Mr. Fine, speaking of more future outlets for automatic sales, said he believed discotheques, which are frequented by young people, might prove good sites for drinks and snacks machines, etc.

Some vending companies are probably already exploring the possibilities of these locations. Joseph Sankey and Sons, the vending machine manufacturers, have come very close with the specially designed vending machine installation in the teenagers' own room, "The Hideaway" aboard the new British vessel, the m.v. "Spero". Situated on the lower deck, the room is sound-proofed and features carefully chosen decor with subdued lighting and a discotheque atmosphere created with the provision of space for dancing around the juke box.

Three Sankey machines include a Super Compact model dispensing seven selections of tea, coffee and chocolate at sixpence per cup, a soft drinks machine vends milk and orange drinks at sixpence, and an ice-cream vender operates on one shilling insertion. The two sixpenny units will also accept similar Swedish silver coins of 50 ore. All three machines are finished in a dark blue to blend with the decor.

Beer vending

Brewery companies are certainly interested in automatic vending, even to the extent of vending beer. Their interest in beer vending was first noticed some four years ago, about the time that Vending Automats Ltd. introduced beer-vending machines at a Licensed Victuallers Exhibition in Brighton.

This firm has also equipped several fully automatic cafeterias at service stations on the British motorways.

Anything that is rather revolutionary takes time to make an impression on an established trade, and brewery companies are no exception. It is only during recent months that they have publicised their interest in beer vending. Ind Coope have installed draught beer vending machines on two cargo ships on the Manchester Line, and the crews of both ships are reported to be very pleased with the beer and the automatic dispensers.

Primarily as an experiment, another famous brewery company, Watneys, have installed a beer vending machine in "The Stag" public house at Victoria, London. The machine operates on tokens which customers buy at 1/2d. each, a penny cheaper than the beer purchased over the counter.

A spokesman for Watneys said: "We hope the idea catches on, but it will never replace the bar maid; it is strictly for quick service". For example, it has been found that many customers prefer to get a quick couple of half-pints from the machine than push their way through to the bar.

Cigarette vending

Coffee machines, and particularly beer machines, are new, but cigarettes have been sold through machines in public houses and many other commercial and industrial sites for years and among those best equipped to talk on this subject is Eric Sutton, the managing Director of Stocontrol Service Ltd.

"When I came into the coin-operated machine business about 40 years ago", he began, "I was convinced in my mind that the day would come when, where cigarettes are sold as a service and where profit is not the main consideration—in such places as public houses, clubs, cafes, restaurants, hospitals and factory canteens, etc.—they would want the service of vending machines to overcome the many problems. The main problem being pilferage and, secondly, the low profit margin on cigarettes. But it took 30 years before the vending machine was accepted as a very necessary item of equipment".

Over the past five years, Stocontrol have gained considerable experience in the use of vending machines on licensed premises, which now represents 80 per cent. of their business. To-date they have more than 25,000 machines in operation and they are currently being installed at the rate of 10,000 a year. A large number of their machines have been on site for upwards of five years, are still in use, and during that time have not suffered a serious breakdown.

A number of brewers have Stocontrol machines installed throughout the whole of their managed houses on a service basis. They are not involved in any financial outlay, do not have to buy stocks of cigarettes, and are paid a commission on sales—and this is usually under a seven-year contract. A strong argument in favour of machines in public houses is that the bar staff can spend more time persuading customers to buy more drink, or try a different brand of whisky, etc.

In a number of instances, Sto-control find that the brewer or the licensee requires a full service. He wants machines not only to sell cigarettes, but tobacco, cigars, matches and sometimes confectionery and nylon stockings. Sto-control can produce and supply machines for all these purposes.

New machines

A new 10-column cigarette vending machine which is probably the first precision-built wooden commercial type, designed to give the opportunity for maximum sales and profits, was introduced a few months ago by Sto-control. When operated and field-tested by independent parties, the sales on licensed premises increased by as much as 65 per cent over the normal six-column machine.

Measuring 27½ ins. high x 27½ ins. wide x 8 ins. deep, the machine is only fractionally larger than Stocontrol's previous six-column 10s and four-column 20s machines, and yet it holds 240 packets of 10 which is exactly double the capacity of the others. As well as being on popular modular lines, it has improved coin selection and increased brand coverage.

Although the machine is made of wood it is exceptionally robust and according to a Government Research Dept. it would be more difficult to smash than the usual machines constructed of eight-gauge metal.

Two new machines, a multi-unit cigarette machine and a perfume vending machine, are the first of an entirely new range of machines being produced by Autonumis Ltd. at their new spacious factory in Tetbury, Gloucestershire.

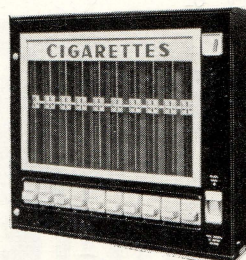

Designed to take 10s, 20s or king-size packs, the cigarette machine is available with four or six columns and can be wall-fixed or mounted on a tubular metal stand, which Autonumis can supply. By incorporating the latest techniques and styling, servicing and filling of the machine is simplified and time spent on sites reduced to a minimum. It is unit constructed and features a frontal opening. The entire fascia opens with a spring-loaded motion and drops down in a flat position, affording easy access to all parts of the machine. Two locks secure the front when closed.

Each column unit with its separate coin mechanism can be quickly removed and replaced by plugging-in another on the spot. All denominations of coinage can be handled and the machine can also cope with any price changes from a halfpenny

Lamp posts come in handy

IDEAS on vending various commodities at the drop of a coin have existed for many years, but one of the most interesting we have come across was described in the "Sunlight Year Book" of 1899.

Described by the publishers, Lever Brothers Ltd., as "A treasury of useful information of value to all members of the household", the "Scientific Section" of the book gives the following information on a revolutionary hot drink vender:

"Street lamps have been erected in London to supply a gallon of hot water for a halfpenny on the 'penny-in-the-slot' system; and for another penny to supply a compressed slab of cocoa or tea; compact with condensed milk and sugar. Thus for 1½d. you can have a cup of tea or cocoa in the street.

"The method of utilising the street lamps for this purpose is very ingenious. The large post of the lamp contains a tank holding 30 to 50 gallons of water, supplied from the mains under the street. A small quantity of water is carried through a spiral pipe round the lamp flame several times and then into a little boiler right at the top, which turns it into highly heated steam, and the steam passing down again boils a gallon of water in a small tank, and then passing still through its pipe runs through the large tank.

"In an ordinary kettle you cannot heat the water above boiling point because the steam escapes; but close the vessel completely and the heat rises far beyond boiling point. Consequently the steam in the little closed boilers of these street lamps become very highly heated and is able to raise the single gallon to boiling point.

"When the halfpenny is paid, and the handle pulled, the gallon tank of boiling water is emptied, and when the handle is closed the tank is refilled from the large tank, and down comes the superheated steam and boils it in about three minutes, and so on all day long.

"The first lamp of this kind was erected in Queen's Buildings, a block of model dwellings in Southwark, in April, 1898".

Presumably the idea did not catch on; perhaps if the lamp post had vended a gallon of beer instead of a gallon of water . . .

to 10 shillings, with little adjustment. The introduction of decimal coinage would present no problems, as the necessary conversions could be speedily carried out.

Coin tester units used in the machine are relatively simple but are found to be discriminating enough for the vast majority of locations. If a customer fails to insert the correct coinage it is automatically refunded, in the same way as change, if any. There are no reject buttons to push. Change tubes are made of clear plastic enabling bent coins to be more readily detected and so removed to prevent baulking. Goods are selected by depressing a flat lever at the base of the appropriate column, which action also releases the product into the delivery chute.

A wood grain plastic fabric is used as a finish to the machine; in this way it has the commendable strength of steel coupled with the attractive appearance of wood. Because the machine is entirely mechanical, a supply of electricity is only needed for the illuminated Perspex (inset) advertising panel on the front of the machine, which is lit by fluorescent tube lighting.

The second machine, dispensing small phials of perfume, is a neatly-styled metal wall unit finished with a linen-texture plastic fabric designed to blend with modern decor. It operates on half-crown insertion and offers six different perfumes selected by pressing the appropriate button. To facilitate filling and servicing, the entire front and sides of the case lift up and can be secured in a horizontal position. This machine is suitable for ladies' cloakrooms and would compliment other Autonomis machines vending feminine requisites.

wall-fixed machines which are used extensively for vending branded confectionery lines and other wrapped products. Normally these machines are sprayed to a specific colour and then silk screened to suit customers' products and other individual requirements.

In recent years, Autonumis have re-styled the cabinets of the machines and introduced innovations such as the Vendbar, a mobile construction fitted with eight or 12 independent units to vend confectionery, chocolate and biscuits. Vendbars are ideal for exhibitions and fairs, etc., where it is an advantage to have machines that can be wheeled away when not in use. They are also proving popular in factories and in schools where they have replaced the old type tuck shop.

Steady demand

National Automatic Machines Ltd. have experienced a steadily increasing demand for their cigarette machines during the past two or three years, particularly for licensed premises. They have a wide range of metal and wooden-type machines, de-luxe and simple. National supply many operators up and down the country and have several models that are especially suited to them in respect of price and capacity.

Among these there is the National Economy Six, a six-column metal machine for packets of 10s or 20s and a capacity of up to 36 packets of 10 per column. Each column is adjustable in seconds to operate on one or more coins of the same denomination. The National Caribbean Six, designed for wall mounting in clubs, hotels, saloon bars and restaurants, has the same mechanism as the Economy, but comes in a strong wooden cabinet with a veneer of African Sapele. Overall dimensions are 34 ins. high x 24 ins wide x 10½ ins. deep.

An inexpensive machine for selected sites, the National cigarette dispenser is a simple coin-operated unit produced to the same high standards as other National equipment. It is available in two models: (a) Six columns for packs of nine or 10 cigarettes, according to requirements, on half crown insertion; (b) Four columns for 18s including King Size and packets of 20 on insertion of two half-crowns or three florins.

For the better-class sites, there is the National Africa Console vending machine with similar mechanisms, column arrangements and applications as the Italia 10 column models, but fitted in a strong wooden cabinet with a veneer of African Sapele coated with transparent polyester for fire-proofing and elimination of damp. Overall dimensions are 51¾ ins. high x 36¾ ins. wide x 16 ins. deep.

No one can safely predict what twists and turns the automatic vending machine industry will take during the next 10 years, but at least it seems that it is now travelling along the right lines.

New Ancillary Equipment

A NEW range of "skeleton" timers has been announced by the sole distributors, D. Robinson & Co. Ltd. Made in the U.K. by the Rodene Timer Company, this new "30 series" range comprises single cam re-setting and re-cycling models, and a dial-type re-setting model (see picture).

The Type 30-A Single Cam Timers have a pair of cams which are rotating continuously, changing over a micro-switch once per revolution. The cams are easily pre-set to give a switch operation for any period between 7° and 353° of rotation. Alternatively, specially machined cams can be provided to give up to eight switch operations per revolution.

When energised the Type 30-U Auto Re-setting Cam Timers turn a pair of cams as used on the type 30-A, until a stop at the 300° position is reached, when the motor stalls, holding the cams in this position until the motor is de-energised when the timer re-sets. A shift gear in the motor then de-energises, and the return switch re-sets the cams to their position.

The cams are easily pre-set to change over the switch at any time during the running period and if desired, to change it back again before the stop is reached. Alternatively, the switch can be left operated until the timer is re-set.

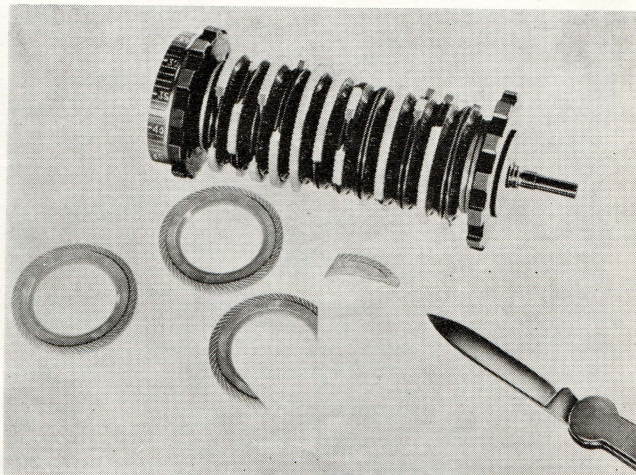

The Type 30-F Auto Re-Setting Dial Timers are flush mounting models, employing self-clutching stallable motors. The time period is set by the front-of-panel knob and at the end of this period a change over switch is operated. The motor is stalled, holding the switch in this position until the motor is de-energised when the timer re-sets.

This firm has also recently introduced an open "C and S" relay with up to 10 contacts. It has a laminated frame and is supplied for operation on 440v A.C. or 250v D.C.

ANOTHER "first" in industrial timers—cuttable cams —has been announced by Magnetic Devices Ltd.

The cuttable cam has been developed to meet demands from many sections of industry, and enables the user to cut the cam to his own requirements. The primary advantage of this cam is that it enables many operations per cycle, as against one operation per cycle with conventional cams.

Other advantages of the new cam include the facility now available to the user to change the pattern on any one cam, as spare cams are supplied with each timer, and economy. Previously, with metal cams allowing only one operation per cycle, where more operations were required cams have had to be specially profiled.

The new cams are available for use with every timer in the Series 800 range, comprising over 16 basic types offering wide variations for A.C. or D.C. voltages.

EASY access for connections and a firm base for panel mounting are two of the advantages of the new S10 three-pole changeover relay by Simmonds Relay Ltd.

It is rated at 6 amps 250v A.C. (non-inductive) or 10 amps 30v D.C. (non-inductive), with coils available up to 130v D.C. or 260v A.C.

PERSONALITY PIX

Centre. Many coin machine manufacturers are well acquainted with Keyswitch Relays Ltd., and will probably be seeing a lot in the future of Mr. T. Starr, appointed the company's Field Sales Manager in January.

Bottom right: "Move of the year" (so far) could be the description of Geoff Grange's departure from Mar-Matic Sales Ltd., to Ainsworth Consolidated Industries (G.B.) Ltd., where he is now General Manager. Picture shows him being greeted by Len Ainsworth.

Mr. John Brooker, 51, who started his new job in February as Foreshore, Entertainments and Publicity Manager at Skegness. Mr. Brooker arrived at the resort from Deal in Kent, where he was Publicity and Catering Manager for 2½ years, having previously held a similar position in the London Borough of Bermondsey.

Young at heart, did somebody say? If ever anyone was it is Tommy Murphy, M.B.E., seen here taking time off from the Miller's (Multi-Slots) Ltd. stand at the January Northern Amusement Equipment and Coin-operated Machine Exhibition to have a go on kiddie ride Zebo. Looking on is B. Noble, director of Ride-A-Matics, who showed the ride.

All in the trade (males, at any rate) should be grateful to Miss Symplay, Marie Rennie, for brightening up many of the recent coin equipment exhibitions. She is seen here at Blackpool, about to set off for a tour of the hall on a Baby-Kart.

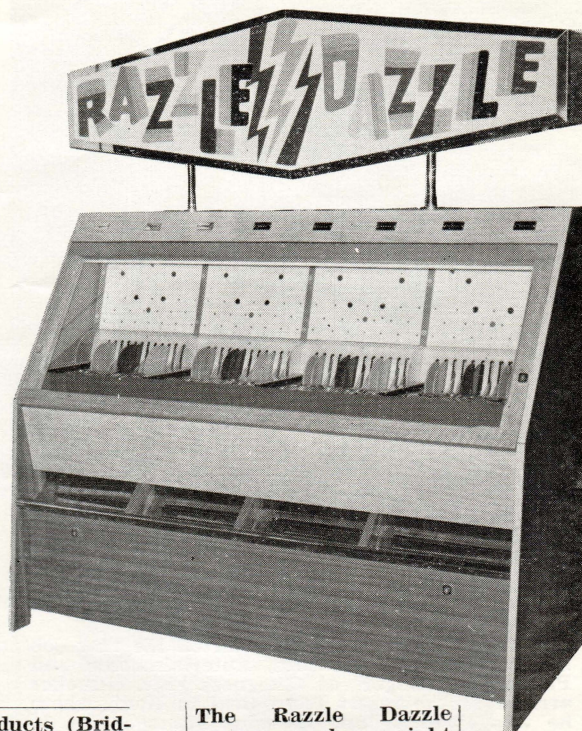

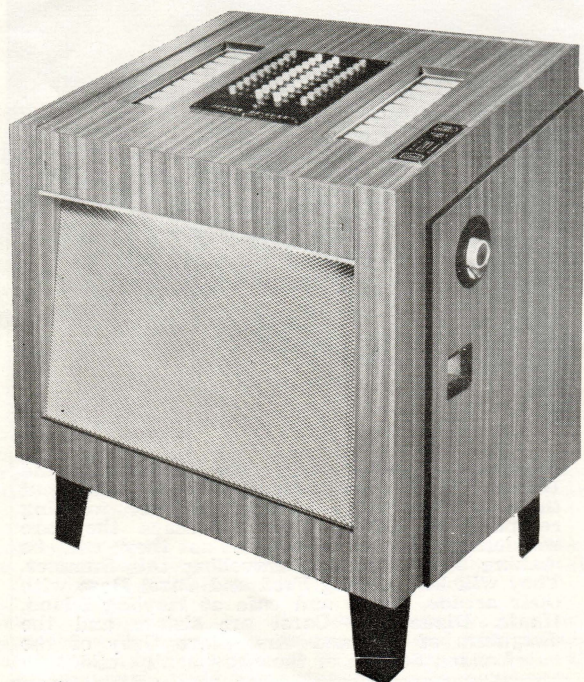

Newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert and Dianne Turner look thoughtful as they cut their wedding cake at their Winter wedding reception at Ilford, Essex. Perhaps they are wondering about the future as they will be making a change from travelling this Summer. They will be assisting Fred and Carol Rose with their arcade, Bingo and cafe at Hayling Island, Hants. Diane and Carol are sisters and the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Gray of the London Section of the Showmen's Guild.

NEW AMUSEMENT MACHINES

The Merrymaker 1d.-play fruit machine from Mills Bell-O-Matic with new flash.

This smart-looking phonograph is in actual fact a rebuilt Bal-Ami 40, one of the conversions carried out by C. Helm (Automatics). The cabinet is in walnut-finish Planika, and a new switching unit is fitted. The complete rebuilding kit can be supplied for the customer to carry out the work himself, and the conversion is also available for G80 juke boxes.

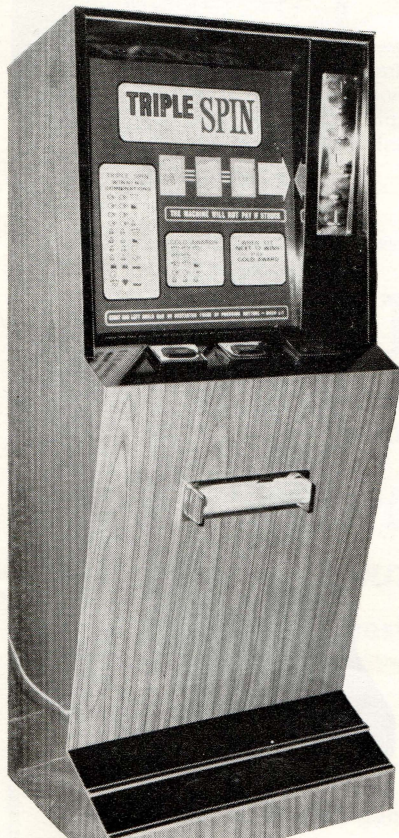

The Razzle Dazzle penny pusher eight player machine of Melroy Automatics Ltd. This measures only just over 5ft. in width.

Rollite Products (Bridlington) Ltd. manufacture this unusual-looking machine, the Moonraker. The play surface consists of a replica of the moon's surface full of craters, the bases of which are spring-loaded. Pennies are rolled into the machine and when a certain quantity land in a crater a payout is made from that particular crater.

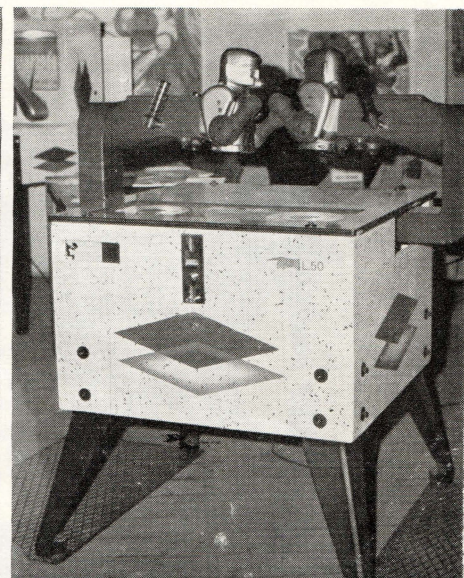

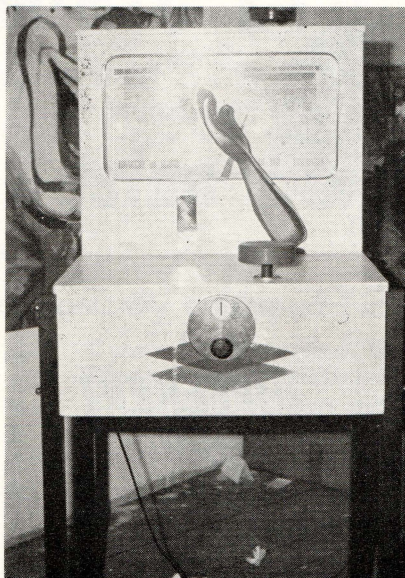

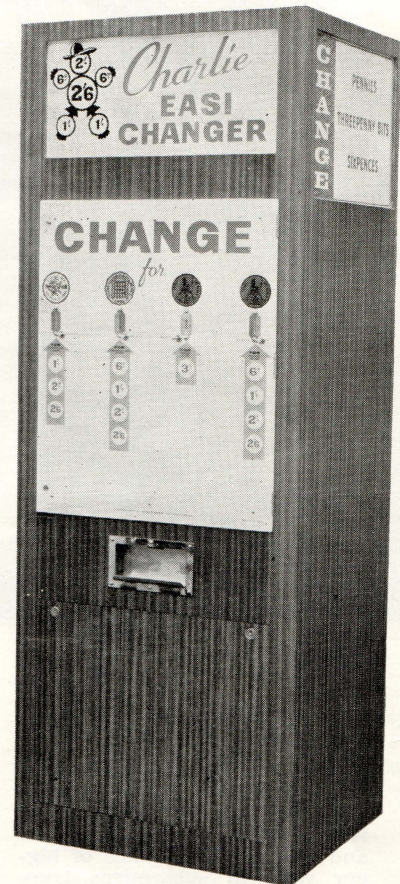

The Autoshoot Rifle Range, available from Regent Automatic Supply. On the insertion of sixpence the target lights up and the score is registered automatically each time the target is hit. The rifle is a conventional lightweight competition gun and shoots real pellets.

The Triple Spin Electric console fruit machine now available from Easyserve Ltd. and designed with the pub trade in mind. The machine incorporates a change-giver, and the outer reels can be restarted twice during the play cycle. The mechanism in this machine consists of four pull-out units interchangeable with any other unit.

Useful on many locations would be the Charlie Easi Changer, manufactured by Donald Deakin Ltd. It gives a variety of change for sixpences, threepenny bits, and pennies. The firm also make a combined fruit machine stand/changer.

Among the items of equipment shown at the Hannover Showmen's Exhibition earlier this year were these two coin-operated machines, both displayed by the Italian Ingenis firm. On the left is the Muscular Strength Gauge in which the player grips the iron arm and tests his strength, the result showing on an illuminated score board. On the right is the Mini-Boxer from the same firm. This is a two-player game, for which the players hold grips to manipulate two model boxers during 12 rounds. The duration of the game is regulated by a time switch; in the case of a knock-out it terminates immediately. The score is shown on the flash.

The Lucky Loser electric upright available from Peter Simper and Co. In addition to straight play the player can hold the play and deliberately lose in order to build up credit and enhance his chance of bigger wins in subsequent tries. The machine can have a remote control counter behind a bar with the score that is registered on the machine. When a winning player has received his goods from the barman the latter releases a button on the remote control counter and the number there and on the machine is returned to zero.

The Sega Continental fruit machine distributed by Ruffler and Walker which can be played on 6d. or discs with an all-disc payout. The machine incorporates a credit meter which allows the player to stock up with up to 99 coins or discs before he need operate the machine.

The Bunge Bunny is the latest Grosvenor console model which Ainsworth Consolidated Industries (G.B.) Ltd. are distributing for pub use. This machine can play on either 6d coins or checks and pays out in checks. When the top panel is lit a bonus 5/- award is paid and three bars in any position pay 10/-.

9 DIFFERENT KIDDIE RIDES

(all with or without appropriate music). Can be mounted on stands suitable for fitting to juvenile roundabouts.

THE ULTIMATE IN CONTROL?

ONE of the most up-to-date Bingo systems in the country was recently installed in the Grand Casino, Southport, by Automatronic Ltd. One of its main achievements is to let the players know exactly what is going on on the stage. A television camera pointing at the chute or the blower gives a picture of the next ball to be taken by the caller and when this is placed in the number board it is shown on two screens elsewhere in the hall and a further two screens show the number of the call in the game being played. The caller on stage has nothing to remember—it is all done for him automatically including the recording of the numbered balls in the slots on his board, so that they can be checked at a later stage if required.

The impressive stage setting at the Grand Casino, Southport.

When a "house" is called the caller presses a button which results in a bell ringing, the last number called being flashed, the prize money board flashing, and the large Bingo sign at the front of the stage flashing. The caller can operate the illuminated number board manually in an emergency. The brains behind all this is a special computer.

Automatronic can tailor their system to individual requirements and will also design and erect the stage decor.
